LEASED Y. M. C. A. BUILDING

Water and Light Companies Will Occupy a Portion of the Building.

WORK IS PROGRESSING.

Rooms Being Finished Up Ready For Occupancy About November 1.

The Hopkinsville Water Company and the City Light Company have leased a part of the Y. M. C. A. building jointly for a term of years and will move from their present quarters on South Main street about Nov. 1. The portion of the concrete building to be occupied will be the large front room, three rear rooms and the basement. The work of finishing up these rooms according to the original specifications is now in progress and it is the plan to finish them by the 1st prox. The directors of the Y. M. C. A. reserve the right to finish up the entire building at any time. However, the Water and Light companies are to remain in their quarters not less than three years, the outside limit of their lease being ten years. The original contract calls for stone steps, etc., but the lessees will not be required to put them in and ordinary steps will be placed in position at once.

Gobin-Nolen.

HOPKINSVILLE, KENTUCKY.

'Who's Who' In the Story.

"SATAN" SANDERSON, the hero, dare-devil, quixotic friend and minister of the Gospel.

HUGH STILES, prodigal and criminal.

JESSICA HOLME, the beautiful heroine, helpless in the rush of events and the principal sufferer in a case of mixed identity.

MRS. HALLORAN, the camp orator.

DAVID STILES, stern, yet forgiving, and at the last made happy by another's unhappiness.

THE BISHOP, the victim of a misunderstanding.

HALLELUJAH JONES, the religious fanatic on whose shoulders rests the whole weight of the story.

EMMETT PRENDERGAST, the false friend, perjurer and thief.

THE SHERIFF, who is very much divided between duty and inclination.

"BIG" DEVLIN, who turns champion instead of prosecutor at the hero's race with death.

Prendergast poured the gold back into the bag with a cunning look. The other had asked for no share of it. At that moment he decided to say nothing of the evening before, of the day before the horseback journey, lest Hugh, cudgeling his brains, might remember he had been offered a half.

"There's plenty more where that came from, all right," he said, "and I'll teach you again how to get it one of these days."

Prendergast said little during the meal. When the table was cleared he lit his pipe and took from a shelf a board covered with pencilled figures and scrutinized it.

"Hope you remember how to play old sledge?" he said.

Harry did not move. As they ate he had been wondering how long he could abide that sinister presence. As he was about to speak a knock came at the cabin door, and Prendergast opened it.

The visitor Harry recognized instantly. It was the man who had called for fair play at the fight before the saloon, who had drawn him into the hotel.

"Felder carried a bundle under his arm. He nodded curtly to Prendergast and addressed himself to Harry.

"I am the bearer of a gift from some one in the town," he said. "I have been asked to deliver this to you." He put the bundle into the other's hands.

Harry drew up one of the chairs hastily. "Please sit down," he said.

Chapter 17

THE little town had been unconsciously grateful for its new sensation.

The return of Hugh Stiles and his apparent curious transformation was the prime subject of conversation. For a half year the place had known but one other event as startling.

That was the finding some months before of a dead body—that of a comparative stranger in the place—thrust beneath a thicket on Smoky mountain, on the very claim which now held Prendergast and his partner.

The "amen corner" of the Mountain Valley House had discussed the pros and cons exhaustively. There were many who ascribed to the loss of memory and took their cue from Devin, who, smarting from his humiliation and nursing venom, revamped suspicion wherever he showed his battered face.

In his opinion Hugh Stiles was "playing a sick game."

"Your view is colored by your prejudices, Devin," said Felder. "He's been a blackleg in the past—granted. But the devil's his due. As for the other ugly tale, there's no more evidence against him than there is against you or me!"

"They didn't find the body on my ground," had been the other's surly retort, "and I didn't clear out the day before either."

The phenomenon, however, whether credited or poohpoohed, was a drawing card. More than a few found occasion to climb the mountain by the hillside trail that skirted the lovely cabin. Those as likely as not saw Prendergast lounging in the doorway smoking, while the younger man bowed, leading a trench along the brow of the hill to bring the water from its intake, which Harry's quick eye had seen was practicable.

The spectacle of Hugh Stiles, who had been used to pass his days in the saloons and his nights in even less becoming resorts, turned practical miner added a touch of opera bouffe to the situation that to a degree modulated the right of disparage. It was the consensus of opinion that the new Hugh Stiles seemed vastly different from the old; that he was "playing a game!" It was a curious one.

On the one side was a black record, exemplified in Prendergast—clouded indeed, a shuddering abhorrence of his past sins as he saw it through the prism of public opinion; on the other was a grim constancy of purpose, a passionate wish to reconstruct the warped structure of life of which he found himself the tenant, day of healthful, peace inspiring toil, a woman's face that threaded his every thought. As he wielded his pick in the trench or laboriously washed out the few glistening grains that now were to mean his daily sustenance he turned often to gaze up the slope where, set in its foliage, the glass roof of the sanitarium sparkled softly through the Indian haze. Strange that the sight should mysteriously suggest the face that haunted him!

Prendergast saw the abstracted regard as he came up the trail from the town. He was in an ugly humor. The bag of gold dust which he had shown to Harry he had not returned to the hiding place in the wall, and with this in his pocket the fare table had that day tempted him. The pouch was empty now.

Harry's back was toward him, and the gold ran in which he had been washing the gravel lay at his feet. With a careless, unheeding laugh Prendergast stole into the cabin and reached down from the shelf the bottle into which each day Harry had poured his scanty find under his affection of surprise. "Can't you attend to your own rat killing?" he growled. "I guess I've got a right to want it now."

"Not to that," said Harry quietly. "We shall touch the bottom of the four sack tomorrow. You expect to get your meals here, I presume."

"I still look forward to that pleasure," answered Prendergast, with an evil sneer. "Three meals a day and a rotten roof over my head. When I serve it, the hospitality overcomes me. All I have done is to keep you from starving to death and out of food at the same time. I only taught you a safe way to beat the game, an easier one than you seem to know, and to live on Easy Street."

"I am looking for no easy way," responded Harry, "whatever you mean by that. I expect to earn my living as I'm earning it now. It's an honest method, at all events."

"You're growing fired particularly since you lost your memory," retorted Prendergast, his eyes narrowing. "You'll be turning down one of these days. Perhaps you expect to get the town to take up with you and to make love to the beauty in the green riding habit that brought you here on her horse the night you were out of your head."

Harry started. "What do you mean?" he asked thickly.

Prendergast's oily manner was gone now. His savage temper came uppermost. "I forgot you didn't know about that," he scoffed. "I made a neat story of it in the town. They've been gabbling about it ever since."

Harry started. "What do you mean?" he asked thickly.

Prendergast's oily manner was gone now. His savage temper came uppermost. "I forgot you didn't know about that," he scoffed. "I made a neat story of it in the town. They've been gabbling about it ever since."

Harry caught his breath. As through a mist he saw again that green habit on the hotel balcony—that face that had haunted his waking consciousness. It had not been Prendergast alone, then, who had brought him here, and her act of charity had been made, no doubt, a thing for the tittering of the town, cheapened by chitter, coarsened by joke!

"I wonder if she'd done it if she'd known all I know," continued the other malevolently. "You'd better go up to the sanitarium, Hugh, and give her a nice sweet kiss for it!"

A lust of rage rose in Harry's throat, but he choked it down. His hand fell like iron on Prendergast's shoulder and turned him forcibly toward the open door. His other hand pointed, and a suppressed voice said: "This cabin has grown too small for us both. The town will suit you better."

Prendergast shrunk before the wrathful glare, but he glowered, "and you think you can go it alone!" The old suspicion leaped in the malicious countenance. "Well, it won't pay you to try it yet. I know too much! Do you understand? I know too much!"

Harry went out of the cabin. At the door he turned. "If there is anything you own here," he said, "take it with you. You needn't be here when I come back!"

His fingers shaking with the black rage in his heart, Prendergast gathered his few belongings, rolled them in the white horse skin which he drew from beneath his bunk and wrapped the whole in a blanket. He fastened the bundle in a pack strap, slung it over his shoulder and left the cabin. He settled his burden and went rapidly down the trail, turning over in his mind his future schemes.

As it chanced, there was one who saw his vindictive face. Jessica, crouched on the Knob, had seen him come and now deigned, peep on him, and guessed that the pair had parted company. Her whole being flamed with sympathy. She could see his malignant scorn plainly from where she leaned, screened by the bushes. It terrified her. What had passed between them in the cabin? She left the Knob wondering.

All that evening she was ill at ease. At midnight, sleepless, she was looking out from her bedroom window across the phantom peopled shadows, where on the face of the pale sky the

stars trembled like slow tears. Anxiety and dread were in her heart; a pale phantom of fear seemed haunting in the shadows; the night was full of dread.

Harry caught his breath. As through a mist he saw again that green habit on the hotel balcony—that face that had haunted his waking consciousness. It had not been Prendergast alone, then, who had brought him here, and her act of charity had been made, no doubt, a thing for the tittering of the town, cheapened by chitter, coarsened by joke!

"I wonder if she'd done it if she'd known all I know," continued the other malevolently. "You'd better go up to the sanitarium, Hugh, and give her a nice sweet kiss for it!"

A lust of rage rose in Harry's throat, but he choked it down. His hand fell like iron on Prendergast's shoulder and turned him forcibly toward the open door. His other hand pointed, and a suppressed voice said: "This cabin has grown too small for us both. The town will suit you better."

Prendergast shrunk before the wrathful glare, but he glowered, "and you think you can go it alone!" The old suspicion leaped in the malicious countenance. "Well, it won't pay you to try it yet. I know too much! Do you understand? I know too much!"

Harry went out of the cabin. At the door he turned. "If there is anything you own here," he said, "take it with you. You needn't be here when I come back!"

His fingers shaking with the black rage in his heart, Prendergast gathered his few belongings, rolled them in the white horse skin which he drew from beneath his bunk and wrapped the whole in a blanket. He fastened the bundle in a pack strap, slung it over his shoulder and left the cabin. He settled his burden and went rapidly down the trail, turning over in his mind his future schemes.

As it chanced, there was one who saw his vindictive face. Jessica, crouched on the Knob, had seen him come and now deigned, peep on him, and guessed that the pair had parted company. Her whole being flamed with sympathy. She could see his malignant scorn plainly from where she leaned, screened by the bushes. It terrified her. What had passed between them in the cabin? She left the Knob wondering.

All that evening she was ill at ease. At midnight, sleepless, she was looking out from her bedroom window across the phantom peopled shadows, where on the face of the pale sky the

The Weather.

FOR KENTUCKY—Generally fair
Thursday.

The body of Consul Ben H. Ridgely, who died in Mexico, will be brought to Louisville for interment.

The State Fair cleared $13,264.52 on gate receipts and $1,000 on advertising. There were 7,350 entries.

Former Senator Wm. A. Clark, of Montana, will take the stump for Bryan.

W. A. Rothwell, member of the Democratic National Committee from Missouri, died at Moberly, Sunday.

The Henderson Journal plant has been sold to Sol Heilbronner, attorney for unknown parties, for $5,500, by the master commissioner.

Hearst has read another of his stolen letters showing that John D. Archbold sent Congressman Sibley, of Pennsylvania, a check for $5,000, with a note of thanks for his "efficient action" in the "subsidy matter." Sibley is a Republican.

The Messenger announces that L. Yonts will succeed E. W. Clark as business manager of the paper and Mr. Clark will take the place of Mr. A. M. Wallis, who recently resigned as editor. Mr. Yonts will not abandon his law practice, his law office being in charge of his partner, S. T. Fruit.

Judge Evans in impelling the Federal grand jury at Louisville took occasion to remind them of the statutes forbidding the solicitation or acceptance of campaign contributions in any Federal building, or the sending of any written contribution into such building requesting contributions. John M. Atherton is the foreman.

Two years ago Will Fenwick and Josie Dant, of Daviess county, were granted license to wed, but Josie changed her mind and the wedding did not take place. Last Sunday Will Fenwick and Annie Dant, Josie's younger sister, were married. The groom, it appears, was undated for two years, but won at last. Where there is a Will there is a way.

Walter Wellman, who is "doing" the doubtful States for the Record-Herald, of Chicago, says Ohio is the most doubtful of all the States, with the present leaning to Bryan and that unless something is done at once to check the labor stampede to Bryan a Taft will lose his own State. As that desperate resort the Republican candidate has canceled his Western dates and is making a personal canvass in the labor centers of Ohio this week.

PHINNEY'S BAND TO GIVE 2 PERFORMANCES

PROF. FREDERICK PHINNEY.

Frederick Phinney, the distinguished director, and his famous band will appear at the Tabernacle this afternoon and tonight and will present a program of unusual brilliancy at both concerts. The band's engagements this season have been one continuous triumph and their success greater, perhaps, than any similar organization. Surely a rare musical treat is in store for our music-loving people.

Congressman Stanley will speak at Madisonville Saturday and reply to Gov. Wilson's speech.

The Henderson registration has been much improved by the last days. Of a total of 2,549, 1,559 are Democrats, 167 Republicans and the rest Independents.

Gamblers are fleeing the land seekers at Dallas, S. D., on hand for the opening of the new reservation Oct. 13, and many of them are "dead broke" 1,000 miles from home.

Steele and Henry in the Courier-Journal yesterday gave their reports on Illinois. Steele, Democrat, says Democrats have great hopes of carrying the State and that Chicago will be overwhelmingly for Bryan. The Germans and the Labor vote are stampeding to Bryan, forecasting a landslide. Henry, Republican, says Stevenson is likely to be elected Governor, but the State is safe for Taft. Republicans admit that their campaign fund will reach a million dollars and much of it will be spent in Illinois.

Latest Lynchings.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 12.—A special from Lula, Miss., says Jim and Frank Davis, negroes charged with having shot and probably fatally wounded John C. Kendall, a conductor of the Illinois Central railroad, were taken from jail last night and hanged by a mob.

store for our music-loving people.

Naturally some of our less musically inclined people imagine only the great classical pieces will be rendered. This is a mistake as Director Phinney caters entirely to the taste of the public and aside from the great numbers the program will be interspersed with charming novelties and played as only this great band can render them.

"MAN OF MYSTERY"

Somewhat of a Treat to Theatre Goers.

Drane, the Man of Mystery, is at the Star Theatre all this week and has been engaged for next week. Mr. Drane makes his escape from a crazy jacket, allowing anyone in the audience to put the jacket on him. He also states in his interview that if it is possible for him to secure a combination safe he will allow the police to handcuff and chain him, then place him in an air tight safe and make his escape. This one act is a treat and the Theatregoers seldom have a chance to witness an act of this character. There is also a sketch line to add to the bill at the Star 10c Theatre this week.

WILL CAMPAIGN IN THE EAST

Bryan Wires Hon. A. O. Stanley to Speak For the Ticket

IN 5 NORTHERN STATES.

Stanley Will Give All Possible Time To the National Ticket.

Henderson, Ky., Oct. 14.—That the oratorical abilities of A. O. Stanley are recognized by the leaders of the Democratic party, and especially W. J. Bryan, is evidenced by the following telegram received by Mr. Stanley from Mr. Bryan:

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 7, 1908.
Hon. A. O. Stanley, Henderson, Ky.: Please wire and write John H. Atwood, Chairman Democratic Speakers Bureau, Chicago, exact number of days and where you can speak during October in New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. This is of vital importance. Please give all the time you possibly can.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN.
Mr. Stanley, prior to the campaign, at the personal solicitation of Mr. Bryan, agreed to take the stump in New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois and had made his arrangements to do so when he learned that the Republican nominee was preparing to drag the Society of Equity into politics, and to hold him responsible for the Hopkinsville raid.

He used every influence he possessed with Mr. Worsham and his friends to induce them to keep this matter out of politics. Knowing that his district was overwhelmingly Democratic, and being personally and politically devoted to Mr. Bryan, he agreed to lend him every assistance.

Mr. Stanley's friends feel that he should enter the campaign in the North and East, and feel so well assured of an overwhelming victory in the Second district, that they are urging him to go where his services are in such great demand, and it is more than probable that he will spend considerable of his time in New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Mr. Stanley sent the following telegram to Mr. Bryan:

Henderson, Ky., Oct. 8, 1908.
Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Democratic Headquarters, Auditorium Annex, Chicago, Illinois:

Have wired and written Atwood placing all possible spare time at his disposal. Regret exceedingly that the character of the campaign here keeps me in this district much of the time. A few machine Republicans here, realizing that they cannot win on the merits of their platform, or their candidate, have inaugurated a campaign of abuse and traduction, charging me with incendiaryism and lawlessness. Am forced to defend my honor as a man, my success as the nominee being questioned.

DROPPED INTO OCEAN.

Falling Temperature Causes Balloon to Descend.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The St. Louis, one of the three American balloons to start in the international race for the Bennett cup, fell into the North sea last night, between Helligland and shore about 30 miles out. It was piloted by N. H. Arnold and H. G. Hewitt. Both were rescued, at the point of drowning, by a German steamship which saw them fall.

The men did not know they were over the ocean until they heard the waves, the view being hidden by a fog. The rapid fall of temperature caused a shrinkage of the balloon, and it began to descend.

You are cordially invited to attend our exhibit any day this week. Come and have a cup of coffee and hot biscuits, if you intend to buy or not. Forbes Manufacturing Co. Incorporated.

other side. Just before arriving at the stable the horse broke over the paddock fence, and ran off to the pasture. After hurriedly making several trips to and from the house, and turning everything topsy turvy in the gear room, I found the bride and started off in a run after him. No sooner had I entered the pasture than a Jersey bull attacked me, bellowing hideously. He chased me over the field some time, occasionally tossing me up with his horns and letting me fall like a straddled soldier. At length some cows came along the lane and he quitted me and went off after them.

After running and dodging a great while trying to cut my horse off from other horses in the field, I hemmed him in a fence corner. I put one arm around his neck, and essayed to put the bride on him with the other hand. Finding the bit broken, and the headstall gone, I concluded to tie the reins around his neck. But they were too short, so I caught him by the foretop and led him off to the house.

When I got to the house the horse had turned to a cow, the cow turned to a hideous looking dog, and the dog turned to a long-bearded, red-headed, fiery-eyed giant, with a savage grin upon his time-wrinkled face, long arms and big, rough hands. He caught me in the collar and shut off my breath.

Here I woke up. I guess I must have been doing some loud calling for those standing around my bed seemed very much cheered up when I told them it was only a dream. I had been to sleep just thirty minutes. I haven't yet taken the second dose and cannot tell now what the result will be, but if any of the readers wish to try the remedy before they hear from me again, they are at liberty to do so.

A CHARMING YOUNG MOTHER SAYS:

Mrs. E. W. Brooks.

Weak, Exhausted, Pe-ru-na Gave New Life.
Mrs. E. W. Brooks, 5418 N. Steele St., South Tacoma, Wash., writes: "I want to recommend Peruna to mothers. When my little girl came, I felt very weak and exhausted, and it seemed that I could not regain my strength."

"My mother bought me a bottle of Peruna, after I had tried several other much advertised remedies without relief. I had little faith, as I was very weak, but within a week after I had commenced taking Peruna I was like a different woman."

"Now life and vitality seemed to come each day until in a few weeks I was in fine health and a happy woman. Thanks to your splendid medicine, I have enjoyed good health for several years. I always keep Peruna on hand, as a few doses will set me right when I am feeling badly."

Cataracts of Ears.
Mrs. G. V. Heard, Hempstead, Texas, writes in regard to her son Carl: "My son's ears had been affected since he was a baby. He seemed to have ringing in his head. He would be very fretful for several days, then his ears would run profusely what appeared to be corruption. The last year I thought he had almost lost his hearing and had a local physician treating him for about six weeks. People Who Object to Liquid Medicines Should Buy Peruna Tablets."

TABERNACLE COURSE.

Order of Events and Dates of Attractions.

Our next lyceum course will contain by far the greatest array of talent ever offered on the tabernacle courses. The opening number, on Wednesday, Oct. 28, will be the Rogers-Griley recitals, this strong combination composed of Charles R. Griley, entertainer, and Van V. Rogers, harpist, who have been together and entertained the American public for 18 years. If you wish to know just these people are a success, just ask any one of our patrons who heard them three years ago. On Monday, Nov. 2, the great International Symphony Club will be the attraction. This symphony club is composed of artists who have played with the Boston Symphony Club for twenty-six years; every performer is a recognized virtuoso, and a great treat is in store for all who attend this performance. Mary Fay Sherwood, soprano, will appear with the symphony club; she is well known to the music-loving public, and needs no introduction from us. On Thursday, Dec. 17, Judge Willis Brown, author of the Utah Juvenile Court laws, and founder of the system, will lecture. Judge Brown is a more fluent speaker than Judge Ben Lindsay, and is more in demand than Judge Lindsay, the originator of the juvenile court. Prof. Cherry, of Bowling Green, who had Judge Brown on his course last year says of him: "Judge Brown is a live wire and has a great message to deliver." On Monday, Jan. 11, Dr. John Merritt Driver will deliver one of his famous lectures. The Dr. has traveled extensively, is a brilliant orator and can instruct and interest an au-

CUNNINGHAM-RITTER.

Pretty Home Wedding Monday Night in the City.

Miss Ada Ritter and Mr. William Alexander Cunningham were married at nine o'clock Monday night, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Flora R. Boulware, in this city. The marriage was a pretty home wedding and the ceremony was performed by Eld. H. D. Smith, of the Christian church. The house was decorated with Southern anilax and Miss Elizabeth Nourse played "The Winning Star." The bride and groom were preceded by two little children, Catherine Cook and Joseph Glover, who were followed by Miss Willie Ritter, the maid of honor, a sister of the bride. The bride was attired in white satin, hand-embroidered, and wore a veil of tulle caught with natural flowers and trimmed in pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The ceremony was performed with a ring and was brief and impressive.

Refreshments were served, consisting of cream, cake and bon bons, after which the newly wedded pair took the midnight train for Barnesville, Ga., where they will reside.

The bride is a daughter of William Ritter, formerly a member of the Hopkinsville bar, but has made her home with Mrs. Boulware since she was a small child. She is a pronounced brunette, petite, graceful and pretty and is as accomplished as she is beautiful. Mr. Cunningham was a professor in McLean College last year, but is now teaching in Gordon Military Academy, at Barnesville. He is a Vanderbilt man and gives great promise of success in his chosen profession.

Mrs. W. A. Cunningham and Miss Margaret Cunningham, mother and sister, and Miss Lena Hillman, a cousin of the groom, all of Nashville, attended the wedding.

RATIONAL CURE FOR ECZEMA

No More Dosing the Stomach—Cure the Skin Through The Skin.

When you have a scratch on your hand you wash it out and cleanse it and then the skin cures itself. You do not take blood medicine to cure a festered wound.

The best skin specialists today are agreed that the only way to cure the skin is through the skin.

The fact that eczema is a skin disease is evident from statistics which show that nearly all eczema sufferers are perfectly healthy in all other ways except as to their skin. If the eczema patients were really suffering from an inward malady, the entire body and not only the skin would be diseased.

You can prove immediately the relief of a true skin cure by using oil of wintergreen as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription.

This liquid attacks the disease germs, numbing them while building up the healthy tissue of the skin. We have now handled this meritorious and thoroughly scientific remedy for so long and have seen its reliable result so many times that we freely express our confidence.

GOV. WILLSON

Declines To Talk About Night Riders.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 13.—Gov. Augustus E. Willson of Kentucky, spoke to about 3,000 persons in Evans last night, and contrary to expectations, he did not discuss the night rider troubles in Kentucky. It had been whispered around that he would in some manner reply to congressman A. O. Stanley of Henderson, who made a speech here last week, in which he said that Gov. Willson was a friend of the tobacco trust.

"I do not discuss Kentucky problems away from home," said Gov. Willson. "They are troubles that only concern the people of Kentucky."

Good Woman Is Called Into Life Beyond.

Mrs. Lucy A. Twyman, wife of James A. Twyman, died Tuesday after an illness of two weeks. She was stricken with paralysis the last day of September, which disabled her right side, and continued to grow worse until death ended her sufferings.

Mrs. Twyman was born March 6, 1835, and was in the 74th year of her age. Besides her husband, she leaves four sons and one daughter. Messrs Joe K. Twyman, R. Wood Twyman and G. Leslie Twyman, of this city, and John W. Twyman, of Earlinton, and Mrs. Thos J. Harry, of this city. She was a consistent and devoted member of the Methodist church and her funeral services were conducted at the residence on Virginia street yesterday afternoon by Rev. W. T. Miller. The burial took place in Riverside Cemetery.

A large number of the friends of the family attended the funeral and paid the last tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased, one of the best of women, whose christian example will be long remembered in the community where her long life was spent.

IN FOREST FIRE ZONE.

Graphic Description of the Adirondack Conflagration.

VERY MANY ACRES IN ASHES.

Desperate Efforts of Mountaineers to Save Precious Piles of Lumber and Houses—Rear of Flamas Accompanied to Photographs Popular Ditties

On a recent morning a lumberman who was working on the side of Mount Hurricane, in the Adirondacks, discovered smoke rising from the woods a few miles north and in the direction of Big Crow mountain. He reported this fact to his boss, and messengers were hastily sent to warn the men below to call out the fire warden of the village of Keene. Lumbermen were known to be working near the fire, and word was sent to them of their danger. This was the first notice of the fire, which has been burning steadily for some time, reducing 5,000 acres of shady forest to ashes, says a Hurricane (N. Y.) special dispatch to the New York Tribune. There were three homes in the fire zone—those of Messrs. Tool, Warren and Sexton—but the danger to these places was imminent, and an effort was made to save the lumber which had been cut in the woods near the fire by Harold Walter. All day the men fought with the desperation and courage which make one always think of a forest fire as a battlefield. All the mountaineers speak of fighting fires as if it were a living thing. In the evening most of the men returned to the Tool homestead for food and rest, but two or three remained in the woods to guard from destruction some seventy-five cords of cut pulp wood. Two men were going up with a pack basket of food for these men. It was a journey of about a mile and a half before the precious pile of lumber the burning of which would spell ruin to Mr. Walter's plans was reached. After traversing a mile of this trail the roaring of the fire came to the ears, faint at first, but continually increasing in power—a deep, menacing sound which was broken only by the cracking of limbs or the thunder of falling trees. Occasionally a red glare sprang up.

The men sought were sitting on the trail waiting, and each day had brought most of their plans to naught, they were still cheerful. All around the trees had burned to ashes, and now through the dark the charred stumps glowed and crackled. Near by towered a rocky ledge, with trees still burning on it. A gentle breeze sighed through the forest, and instantly a thousand red gleams shot through the dusky air, sparks leaped from one tree to another, a bush blazed up, and a startling crackle announced that the forest was only waiting to flare up again whenever the slightest breeze wandered through it. Meanwhile the woods were steadily burning round about.

From the veranda of the Cock and Devil cottage the fire could be seen lighting up the northern sky. Now and then, when a great pile of caught fire, the flames leaped up into the air far above the treetops, throwing a lurid light over everything. Although the night was moonless and the stars obscured by the smoke, one could see to walk along the roads and trails several miles from the fire.

The next day the fire fighting forces were much increased, and as the fire was only three-fourths of a mile from the houses it was necessary to begin digging a trench about them. There was no water within a mile of the camp, and the men had to dig for it. The water for cooking and drinking had to be carried up the steep incline from Hurricane Lodge to Nodoney, as the group of buildings mentioned before are called.

At nightfall the men began struggling in from the firing line. Super was served by Mrs. Tool, who had that day cooked probably 100 meals. Then the photograph was brought out on the veranda, where the tired men lay about, some asleep, others talking of the day's work, others listening to the merry tunes ground out by the talking machine. All the doors were open, and men drifted through the rooms continually, coming in from the fire. Half a dozen men sat about the kitchen sipping a late supper.

Through the noise of the photograph, the faintest of the howling at midnight, and the hum of voices could be faintly heard the low roar of the advancing fire. As the lumbermen passed in and out of the room one caught matches of the conversation, mingled always with the metallic melody from the veranda.

"Hello, Jim! How's the fire up your way?"

"Say, I'm starved. Haven't had a bite since!"

"Jerry, that's a good one. Play it again."

"We came near being cut off up there today."

On the next morning the fire was within 400 yards of Nodoney. A great force of men had gone up Hurricane to measure the wood cut there, so that they might not in claims for the summer's work. Wagon loads were coming from this camp all night with whatever the lumbermen could save from the path of the fire. A thin line of men was stretched around Nodoney, each having a shovel, which he used to beat down the flames as they advanced through the grass. Where the fire was burning in the woods the fight had been given up, and the men now con-from New York boarding with her were kept busy packing up the household goods and getting meals—meals, more meals, all the time. It was proposed to plow a furrow around the houses and keep the fire from leaping over. Meanwhile the flames were creeping nearer and nearer to the Cock and Devil, which had no clearing about it and was therefore doomed. Men had worked all the previous night getting out the household things and the plumbing, so that now it was a mere shell left a prey to the relentless fire. In the late afternoon the cottage burned in spite of the desperate efforts of half a dozen men.

One of the pathetic sights in the forefront of a forest fire is the efforts of the furry inhabitants to escape. Many rabbits hopped across the road within a few yards of the men, but the most inveterate hunter felt no impulse to kill them so plainly were the animals so confused and distressed by their soot, pleading eyes and trembling bodies.

Every thinking person in the Adirondacks is hoping that the state and national governments will take steps to cope with the growing menace of fire which is gradually, year by year, reducing these lovely mountain lands to wildernesses of blackened and blackened stumps. The people and the legislators need to learn that fire protection is in the end vastly less expensive than the loss of the forest. The Adirondacks as "the nation's play ground" it is necessary to give them some adequate measure of protection against the menace of a dry season.

NOTED FEUD LEADER.

Side Lights on Tom Cockrill, Who Was Chief Spirit in Breathitt (Ky.) War. Tom Cockrill, who was recently killed by a freight train at Louisville, Ky., was for four years leader of the Cockrill faction in the Hargis-Cockrill feud in Breathitt county, Ky.

His death removes one of the principals in the most costly feud in both human life and money ever waged in the mountains of Kentucky, and he was the only one on either side to die within the last five years from a cause other than a bullet from the gun of an enemy.

Although less than thirty years old, Tom Cockrill had for years been known throughout the mountains as "Bad Tom," a sobriquet he had earned through his ability to pick a fight and get out of it with a whole skin while his antagonist was usually found with one or more bullet holes in him.

It was the killing of Ben Hargis, the youngest of the Hargis brothers, by Tom Cockrill in February, 1902, that brought on the feud that resulted in the assassination of Jim Cockrill, Dr. R. D. Cox and Ben B. Marcano, all three prominent men and sympathizers with the Cockrill faction, and caused many more equally prominent men who favored the Hargis side to center to leave Jackson and Breathitt counties.

In his fight with Ben Hargis Cockrill was shot and killed. Through the rest of the troubles he was a man to be reckoned with. Tall, spare, ever alert, his sharp, steel blue eyes snapped fire whenever the enemies of his clan were about, and he had the reputation of being ready at the slightest provocation to flash his revolver.

"SEASKUNK."

Disguised Harbor Engineer Surveys and Classifies the Motor Boat.

Two swift motor boats have had all the fun they wanted with the Sandy Hook steamers during the past season and at the same time afforded lots of entertainment to the daily travelers between New York city and the Jersey shore. The boats would run on the windward side of the big liners and hang on for a few minutes close to their forward decks, where most of the fun were congregated.

Sometimes they would drop astern, but over and over again after a careful survey of the gleaming razor prow towering above would dash across it gracefully like dolphins at play.

These exhibitions have not met with the unqualified approval of the silent men in blue and gilt livery in the pilothouse and on the engine deck of the steamers.

One grim engineer surveyed such a maneuver from the main deck port the other day, turned on his heel and walked away with this one muttered word:

"Seaskunk!"

Odd Incident in Moving Picture Show. Martin Donohue of New York city wrote to the editor of the New York Sun as follows concerning a strange occurrence: "While I was sitting in a moving picture theater a few days ago a very peculiar phenomenon occurred which changed the building into an enormous camera. The picture machine getting out of order, the interior of the house became pitch dark. During this period a curtain was pulled back and the camera following a shaft of light to reach the screen, on which could be plainly seen the inverted images of the people in the street—a perfect camera obscura and undoubtedly the largest in the world."

Criminally Noted in the Horse. An old black horse belonging to Henry Harper, a hack driver, walked up to a horse belonging to Edward Sears, another driver at the Greenwood Lake station in Montclair, N. J., the other day, lifting the nose bag from his head, carried it to a convenient part of the station platform and then sat down, lifting the cage which the bag contained. While the old black horse was feasting on the oats he occasionally looked

NATURE'S ESSENCE.

Extracted From Forest Plants.

Nature's laws are perfect if we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. To straighten nature for the cure, to the forest: There are mysteries here that are hidden from you. Take the bark of the black-cherry tree, the root of man-taken, the root of the blackberry, and golden seal root, make a scientific, non-alcoholic extract of these and just the right proportions and you have Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this vegetable extract and alternative of the greatest efficiency. Just the sort of remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that insidious and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of PUBLIC APPROVAL, and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and tonic. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is purified and enriched—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated in the system. Doctor R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invaluable Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an alternative extract of native medicinal roots, without a particle of alcohol, which purifies the blood and cleanses the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is just the tonic builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, pneumonia, or from a debilitating fever. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to get out of order after a long illness, and in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the complete manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver always to expel the poisons from the body, and so cures liver and kidney troubles. If you take this NATURAL blood purifier and nerve tonic you assist your system in manufacturing each day a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is invigorating to the brain and nerves. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which over-worked people experience is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the "breakers" showing up, or "blue," Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all blood troubles as well as being a tonic that makes one vigorous, strong and forceful. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery STRAINS ALONE as the one medicine for stomach, liver and blood disorders that has the endorsement printed upon the wrapper of every bottle leaving which our laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., not only does it STAND ALONE in respect to its ingredients being known, but also as the only tonic and restorative which absolutely contains no alcohol.

"I was taken with a severe cough, weakness in my back, a 'glimmer' over the eyes, and a general stomach and bowels out of order," writes H. Gagliardi of San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 11, 1904. "I had a doctor, but did not care for anything, had no life. It was almost misery to move, and my wife told me to read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser and write right away and get two bottles of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and let her take all of one bottle. I felt better. If any doubt the truth of this statement, I will write with my own hand." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure bad food stomach, constipation and indigestion, and cure nearly every disease of man, woman, or child, and is a tonic and invigorator. Send for a free copy.

BOON FOR DRUNKARDS

Salvation Army Uses Ambulance
In Reforming Them.

NOTABLE RESULTS ATTAINED.

Regular Patrols Made of Streets in Cleveland, O.—Corps of Experts Gives First Aid to Those Injured in Drunken Brawls.

The first of its kind in America, an ambulance for drunkards and those injured in drunken brawls, in charge of a corps from the Salvation Army trained in rendering first aid to the injured, now patrols the saloons and Tenderloin districts of Cleveland, O., in the late hours of the night.

In Berlin, Germany, corps of trained workers have done similar work, but without the aid of an ambulance. Some of the members of the Cleveland corps who are introducing the work in the United States are themselves Germans and have had practical experience in their own country along this line, says W. Frank McClure, special Cleveland correspondent of the Los Angeles Times. The addition of the ambulance, they say, is a decided help. The ambulance now in use is a temporary one, but is especially designed and equipped to be ready for service in a few weeks. The new plan is attracting much attention in Cleveland and is bringing notable results.

Members of the corps wear the button of the National First Aid to the Injured Association of America, of which Clara Barton is president. Each one has made a study of rendering first aid to the injured in accordance with medical science.

Each member of the corps is also equipped with a shrill whistle, which is attached to the front of the coat or dress. The workers, going in companies of two or three into the notorious districts, leave the ambulance standing in charge of one of the number at some point on the street, and when they find some one who needs help one of those who make the discovery blows his whistle, and the ambulance comes quickly to the scene.
Each member also has the red cross upon his sleeve, and one in each detachment of the workers carries a lantern.

Men found in saloons who are so drunk that they are to all appearances paralyzed are picked up on a stretcher and taken to a Salvation Army shelter.
When next day they become sober they are given good advice and sent to their homes, if they have homes, or to a pauement; if not, they offer them work and food and shelter. All are invited to attend the religious meetings and urged to start life anew.

Many a man is found in the late hours of the night bleeding as the result of a saloon brawl. His wounds are bandaged by careful hands, and if he is seriously injured or unconscious he is taken in the Salvation Army ambulance to one of the city hospitals. When he is able to leave the hospital he is visited by some of the members of the corps who rescued him and is offered every assistance to keep on his feet and become a man.

Also in the Tenderloin girls are found drunk or helpless from being dragged perhaps. These girls are taken to the rescue home of the Salvation Army.
The corps in making its rounds at night in search of the downfallen and unfortunate carries with it religious tracts and also little tin plates bearing a verse of Scripture, which are placed in the hands of all who will accept them. Coming into a place where men and women are drinking, the members of the rescue corps introduce themselves with the words: "Good evening, God bless you all! We are bringing you some tracts." When they find some one who takes the tracts with much interest and seems willing to listen the workers talk with him. Thus far in the pursuit of this work they have not been roughly treated either by saloon keepers or patrons.

The police in Cleveland are friendly to the plan—in fact, it is in accordance with the "Golden Rule" policy now in force in Cleveland that a man found drunk shall be taken home rather than to jail, especially if it is his first offense.

The work of the new ambulance and corps of rescue workers has been in progress but a few weeks, but in that time 200 streets have been patrolled, 145 saloons have been visited and 2,000 tracts and tin plates have been distributed. Sometimes the corps continues its work until 3 a. m.

Definite results, and instances of permanent good are being chronicled right along. One man for twenty years a drunkard is now reformed and working in the army. The first night's tour resulted in finding a woman in a concert hall in the company of a man who by drink and later a man lying helpless in an alley. The woman was taken to one of the hospitals of the city. The man was placed in a bed at the Salvation Army citadel, where two members of the corps remained to care for him.

Colonel William Evans, recently appointed head of the Salvation Army in Cleveland, first suggested the new plan. Ensign Eugene Helms is in ac-tial charge of the ambulance and corps now at work.

EXPENSIVE LAND CASE

Long Drawn Out Litigation Between Two Neighbors
in North Christian.

THE DOCKET IS BEHIND.

Grand Jury Still in Session and May Spring a Sensation.

Circuit Court yesterday took up the day with a jury trial involving the ownership of six acres of land in North Christian claimed by both John Boyd and W. T. Cavanah. The land is worth about $3 an acre and the case has been in the courts for three years and this is the second jury trial. The court costs already amount to more than $200 and each party has paid for surveys almost equal to the value of the land. Attorneys fees, traveling expenses, loss of time and other items of expense are also to be taken into account and the total costs will probably exceed the value of the land twenty-five times.

The Case of White's Exr. vs. J. R. Caudle was decided in favor of the defendant.

Jim Jesup, col., charged with malicious shooting, and John Henry Cole, grand larceny, demanded immediate trials and their cases were set for yesterday, but not reached on the docket.

Arthur Gray, col., charged with rape, was turned loose, as the prosecuting witness, Modie Major, declined to prosecute.

The docket is running much behind and it is hardly possible to tell when and case will be called.

The grand jury is still in session but has adjourned until Monday and it is rumored that some sensational indictments may be returned.

Read our advertisement in this paper and you will not wonder why they have such crowds every day. Forbes Manufacturing Co. Incorporated.

Louisville Registration.

The total registration in Louisville is the largest ever known, 51,696, divided as follows:

Democrats—22,922.
Republicans—18,555.
Independents—9,255.

White voters, 41,270; colored voters, 10,426.

The registration last year, without the supplementary registration, which has not been taken this year, was as follows:

Democrats—22,931.
Republicans—16,583.
Independents—9,255.

Of the Republicans 9,256 were colored.

These figures show an increase of 991 Democrats and 1,972 Republicans, 1,170 of them negroes.

The district last year, including the city and Jefferson county, gave 9,200 majority for Willson.

The large Independent vote will hold the balance of power and nearly all of the Independents this year will vote for Bryan.

MORGAN MONUMENT

Engaging Attention Of Daughters of Confederacy.

Bardotown, Ky., Oct. 13.—The United Daughters of the Confederacy met here yesterday in their annual State convention. This convention will be of interest to all the members of the local chapters, as the principal business of the meeting will be to plan for the General John Morgan monument.

This monument is to be erected at Lexington and the sculptor, Signor Copenni, has already secured a studio, where he intends to begin work at once.

AMUSEMENTS.

The next attraction at Holland's Opera House will be "Peck's Bad Boy," which comes for one night only, Tuesday, Oct. 20. This is one of the most successful comedies ever put on the road. If you want to laugh you should see "Peck's Bad Boy." There is nothing but laughter and fun in it. The play has been entirely re-written and new scenery, new costumes and specialties provided.

Miss Lucile Wilds takes the part of the "Bad Boy." In connection with "Peck's Bad Boy" the company will give a one-act musical comedy, "Papa's Return." High class specialties will be given also. To spend a pleasant evening you should come out to see "Peck's Bad Boy." Lower floor 50 and 35 cents; balcony 25 and 35 cts.

Telephone Rates Raised.

Moranfield, Ky., Oct. 12.—The Morganfield Telephone company has increased its rates to all out-of-town patrons from $1.25 to $1.65 a month, and has fixed a toll for all out-of-town calls. The company claimed that this step was necessary, as they were operating at a loss, and the city council refused to allow them to increase the rates within the town.

Remember this is for exhibition week only. Ware will not be given after this week. This ware is on exhibition at our store, and must be seen to be appreciated.

Come in any day during the week. Make our store your headquarters. Have coffee and biscuits with us.

Come, if you intend to buy or not; the information gained will serve you in the future.

Facts About

The Great Majestic Range

It is the only range in the world made of Malleable and Charcoal Iron.

It has, beyond any question of a doubt, the largest and best reservoir.

It uses about half the fuel used on other ranges, and does better work by far.

The Majestic All Copper Nickel-plated Reservoir heats the water quicker and hotter than any other. It is the only reservoir with a removable frame.

The Charcoal Iron Body of the Great Majestic Range lasts three times as long as a steel body.

Being made of non-breakable material, there is practically no expense for repairing the MAJESTIC.

As for baking, it is perfection; not only for a few months, but for all time to come.

A Great Majestic Range lasts three times as long as a cheap range, but it doesn't cost three times as much.

PROOF... We don't ask you to take our word for any of the above statements, but if you will call at our store, a man from the factory, where Majestic Ranges are made, will prove to your satisfaction that these are absolute facts, and will show you many more reasons why the Great Majestic Range is absolutely the best that money can buy.
